

The Western Sydney Conference Centre and Pullman Hotel, designed by Sydney architecture and design studio, TURNER, brings a new level of luxury and experience to Penrith.

Pullman Hotel

A carefully curated selection of bold design elements sweep through the hotel, bringing the distinct Pullman signature to life.

The interiors are designed to evoke a sense of discovery and surprise. Contrasting textures, forms and palettes create a seamless, yet exciting experience for guests and visitors transitioning through each area.

The lobby lounge features a rich and dynamic art installation, playful furniture selections and extensive custom-designed elements, while the premium guest rooms showcase high quality and comfort.

TURNER Head of Interior Architecture Monique Franklin:

"The Pullman Hotel has been thoughtfully designed to bring curiosity, knowledge and expertise to deliver spaces that are backgrounds for creating memories.

"The Pullman Hotel [or This] provides a curated series of positive places. We have designed the hotel to provide guests with an elevated experience during their stay, from the arrival moment at reception lobby through to the premium dining restaurant."

WSCC

This new state-of-the-art, flexible entertainment and conference destination is designed to respect and celebrate its surrounding environment.

The fluid, ribbon-like shape of the building is inspired by the nearby Nepean River. This undulating form encourages exploration and movement around the building, and provides moments for meeting and resting.

Raw materials pay homage to the riverbank. The 'riverbank' palette includes raw concrete, rich timber and stone paving to seamlessly transition visitors from outdoor to indoor.

Just as the light bounces and reflects along the river's surface, solid metallic panels dance across the building's soffit, creating a shimmering effect as they catch the light at various times of the day and night.

Internally, the conference and community centres take cues from the horizon, the iconic Blue Mountain Ranges and surrounding landscape.

TURNER Principal Nick Turner:

"The WSCC opens the door to Penrith for business and entertainment functions, boosting local employment opportunities and inviting partnerships across Sydney."

"The design has created a significant new facility for locals and visitors alike – it's sure to activate and transform Penrith."
